

Invercargill City Council

Electing 12 City Councillors

Ian EDWARDS

My principal place of residence is in the Invercargill City Council area.

I have lived in several places around New Zealand and the World and found Invercargill to be a great place to live. We have natural and man-made resources in the region that create our own economy that isn't affected by major economic change, as it does the rest of NZ. This economy affords us the lifestyle we have and a lifestyle that needs to be maintained for our future generations.

We also have terrific, skilled and talented people in the South that want our City to thrive and grow. The same for businesses that export goods and services. To ensure we keep these people and businesses, and attract others, we must provide the best services possible.

Your council needs to be more effective and therefore needs the right people who understand the economics, short and long-term effects, and the needs of the City. You and your future generations deserve better.
